YOUTH

Linger yet upon the hour,
Of the green leaf and the flower;
Art thou happy? For thy sake
Do the birds their music make—
Birds with golden plumage bring
Sunshine from a distant spring?
For thine eyes the roses grow
Red as sunset, white as snow,
And the bees are gathering gold
Ere the winter hours come cold.
Flowers are coloring the wild-wood;
Art thou weary of thy childhood?
Break not its enchanted reign,
Such life never knows again.

THE COURSE OF LOVE.

Kate Blake was the only daughter of Joseph Blake, the old miser of the town of West Brook.

She was more than commonly pretty, and her frank and engaging manners, enhanced the charms of her golden hair, pearly skin, and eyes like the blue skies of Summer. At her father's death she would be heiress to the nice little sum of $70,000, and though men generally profess not to be influenced by pecuniary matters in affairs of love, it is to be reasonably supposed that this prospective wealth by no means lessened the number of her adorers.

Among those most ardent, and perhaps most sincere, was Will Darnmouth, with a heart larger than his purse, and very little thought or care for consequences.

Fortunately, old Jacob never suspected the partiality of his daughter for Will; he would have put her on bread and water before he would have consented to the slightest intimacy with Will Darnmouth.

Jacob Blake was not in favor of marriage. Those who knew his circumstances were not surprised at this, for, to use a phrase more expressive than elegant, Mrs. Blake was a Tartar, with a temper enough for two Tartars. Old Jacob had to "walk Spanish" for the most part, or suffer the consequences, which usually descended on his head in the shape of any domestic utensil which happened to be lying handy.

A maiden sister of Mrs. Blake resided in the family, whose principal business seemed to be act as sort of echo to her brother and his wife. Whatever they thought she thought too.

She regarded it as a primary sin for Kate to associate with young men, and this doctrine was perseveringly drilled into her niece, who, though she never dissented, had her own ideas on the subject.

One day Mr. Blake and his wife went to Dedham to attend a fair, and Miss Peggy being absent at a friend's, Kate was left alone. Will Darnmouth in some way learned the condition of affairs, and early in the afternoon he came over to keep Kate company.

As her parents were not expected home until the next day, and Peggy not until late in the evening, Will felt perfectly secure in stopping awhile after tea; and he and Kate were having a jolly time popping corn in an old fashioned frying pan, over a huge wood fire, when there was a sound of voices at the door.

"Good gracious!" cried Kate, turning white with alarm, "there is aunt Peggy. Oh, Will, what shall we do? She will scold me to death, and father will be furious. Get under the lounge quick! Oh! Will! do for my sake!"

Will could not withstand the pleading in Kate's eyes, and he deposited himself in the designated place.

Kate put out the light, and darting into an adjacent room, in a moment was apparently asleep.

Peggy's voice was heard speaking softly in the hall:

"Be careful, Mr. Pike. There is a loose board there. Softly it may creak."

"Peggy, dear, where are you?" responded the speaking voice of Squire Pike, the widower of a year. "I can't tell which way you have gone."

"There, Daniel! be easy. Good heavens! Daniel Pike! Well, I never!" and a report burst on the air like the uncorking of a champagne bottle.

"Oh, my!" cried aunt Peggy, "what would brother Jacob say? I declare I hadn't been kissed by a man since—"

"Let Jake mind his own business," retorted the Squire. "You and I can take care of ours without his help," and there followed a report similar to the first, only more of it.

Do be quiet, Daniel, and let me get a light. Sit right down there afore the fire, and make yourself at home."

A light was soon procured, Peggy divested herself of her wrappers, and blushing like a girl in her teens, sat down opposite the Squire.

"It's a fine evening," said Peggy, by way of opening the conversation.

"Very," replied the squire, drawing his arm over her back.

"Oh, good gracious! Daniel, don't set so nigh to me. I—that is, I don't consider it strictly proper. Mercy, what's that?"

Both listened attentively.

"It is the wind rattling the window, I guess," said the Squire. "Don't you get so nervous, Peggy."

"I thought it was Kate waking up. And if she should, I should never hear the end of it."

"Hark! There is a noise—I—"

"Gracious aith! its bells. It's Jake and marm coming back! What shall I do? We're done for! Oh, Squire, 'tain't right for us to be nothing to one 'nother. Do help me! what shall I do?"

"Tell me where to go Peggy. Say the word. I'll go anywhere for your sake, if its up the chimney!"

Under the lounge, quick! its wide and well enough. Quick! don't delay a moment!"

The Squire obeyed, but the space was already so well filled that it was with difficulty he could squeeze himself into so small a compass. And just as he succeeded, Mr. Blake and his wife entered the room, floundering along in the dark, for Peggy had deemed it best to extinguish the light. Jake made for the fire, which still glowed red with coals, stumbled over the cricket, and fell headlong against Peggy, who was standing bolt upright, trying to collect her scattered senses.

"The duce!" cried Jake. "Look out there old woman, or you'll be down over me. It's dark as a pocket here, and I've fell over the rocking chair, or the churn, I can't tell which. Hullo! what's that?"

reaching out his hand to feel his situation, and coming in contact with the bare face of the Squire. "By golly! it's got whiskers! Peg! Peg! where are you; and where is Kate; and what is this?"

The Squire did not relish the assault made on his hirsute appendages, and by way of retaliation, he gave a series of vigorous kicks, which hit Will Darnmouth in the region of the stomach, add stirred his bile.

"Look here, old chap!" exclaimed he. "I'm perfectly willing to share my quarters with you, seen' as we're both in for it; but you'd better not undertake to do that again."

"Heavens!" ejaculated Peggy; "whose voice is that?"

"Who in the duce is here? that's what I want to know!" cried Jake, struggling for an upright position. "Hullo! who's fell down over my legs?"

"I'll let you know who's down and who's up!" said the voice of Mrs. Blake; and the old lady scrambled up, only to go instantly down again over the chair.

"Jake where are you? get up this instant, and get a light, or I'll shake your breath out, when I get my feet again."

Jake started to obey, and just then Tighe, the watch dog, who, hearing the uproar, had managed to break loose from his chain, rushed upon the scene, and set up his best howl.

The Squire had a mortal horror of dogs, and neither fear nor love was strong enough to keep him quiescent now. He sprang to his feet with a yell. Will followed. Kate, full of fear for her lover, hopped out of bed and appeared with a flaming tallow dip—Peggy flung her arms around the Squire's neck with a cry of terror, and Jake was silent with amazement. Mrs. Blake was the only one who possessed her wits. She seized the corn popper, and laid it about her with vigor.

Her aim was not always correct, and in consequence, she smashed the looking-glass into a thousand fragments, and knocked down the clock from the shelf, and demolished two bowls and a pitcher that were quietly on the mantle.

The Squire broke from Peggy's embrace, and flashed out of a window. Will followed him, and Mrs. Blake would have pursued by the same outlet, but she was a little too large to get through with ease.

A dreaded counsel was holden; Jake stormed, Mrs. Blake threatened; and at last Peggy and Kate confessed. And Jake and his wife were so rejoiced at the prospect of getting rid of Peggy that they forgave their daughter, and took Will Darnmouth home at the end of the year. And in due time, Peggy and the Squire were made one flesh.

You know how it is yourself—when you took into a mirror.

A MAN who has no bills against him belongs to the highest order of nobility.

Worrying the Bridegroom.

A friend of ours, who once lived in Iowa, used to tell a story of a wedding that he witnessed, where the ceremony was performed on the same couple three times in one night. He was wandering through northern Iowa and southern Minnesota, on a search for timber lands, and was accompanied by a backwoods adventurer named Preston. Near the line between Iowa and Minnesota, they stopped a few weeks at the house of a settler named Jenkins. The latter had a buxom daughter, and was well off for a backwoodsman, and the situation appeared decidedly favorable to Preston. So he courted the daughter and was polite to the parents; the result was that a wedding was arranged, and the neighbors for miles around were invited.

Jenkins was a liberal provider, and weddings were not common in his family. He laid in a half barrel of whiskey, and his wife and daughter cooked enough for a small army, so that nobody should go away hungry. There was a preacher in the neighborhood, who had arrived there recently, and he was invited to unite the pair. He tied the knot, and was rewarded by Preston, who made a mess of the affair by dropping a couple of silver dollars into the mammoth punch-bowl while trying to hand them to the parson.

The bride's arm was called into requisition to lift out the cash, which she did with all the skill of a native of Long Island fishing for "Blue Points" with a pair of oyster tongs.

For the invited guests the serious business began with the supper that followed the ceremony. Preston took his full share of the punch and straight whiskey before retiring to the bridal chamber, which was reached by a ladder through the floor of the garret. Mrs. Preston had been taken there by the bridesmaids half an hour earlier and when the couple had disappeared there was a fresh assault upon the whiskey.

It leaked out in the course of the evening that the parson was not an ordained preacher, but only one of those ministerial flounders who have been "licensed to exhort." When old Jenkins heard the rumor, he went for the exhorter, and extracted from him the horrible fact that he was not really authorized to unite couples in holy matrimony, but he had officiated on this occasion because he thought it was all right, and nobody would know the difference. Jenkins flew around like a boy with a bumble bee in his coat-sleeve; he kicked the unhappy exhorter out of doors, and went up the ladder like a monkey climbing up a window-blind.

"Here you, git up!" he shouted, "you ain't married at all. Get up and come down quick!"

The voice of Preston was heard to draw out that he wouldn't get up and that if his respected father-in-law did not clear out and mind his own business, he would get his nose busted.

Jenkins explained the situation, and the couple arose. In a few minutes they came down the ladder, looking very sheepish, and the bride blushing like a red wagon. There was a justice of the peace in the party, and he performed the ceremony, which unfortunately for Preston, took his only remaining silver dollar. There were more drinks, and then the couple again ascended the ladder to their bridal apartments. Preston muttered, as he climbed the ladder that if he ever found that parson he would hurt his face so that his friends could not identify him without a magnifying glass.

Of course the party down stairs, who were making a night of it, talked over the peculiarities of the wedding, and their talk developed the fact that the justice of the peace lived in Iowa, while the house of Jenkins was in Minnesota. Jenkins was informed of the situation and away he went once more for the ladder. He was louder in his tones than before, and his first words met a prompt answer from Preston.

"Now, look here, old man," said Preston as he bounded out of bed, "there has been foolin' enough around this ladder to night and if you don't git, I'll bust your head."

He picked up a cowhide boot as he spoke, and advanced menacingly. A shrill voice from the bed urged him not to hurt "pa."

"Don't shoot—don't," said Jenkins, as he returned down the ladder, till his head was level with the garret floor. There he paused and explained the state of affairs to the enraged bridegroom, who stood over him with the boot uplifted and ready for a blow.

Preston accepted the explanation, and the result was, that the couple rose, and dressed, and descended the ladder. Then, with Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, and all the guests who were sober enough to stand, they walked half a mile down the road to the Iowa line, and entered the Badger State. There the justice once more united them.

"And this time," said he, as he concluded the ceremony, "you are married now, and for good."

Returning home once more, they found the party so overcome with the fun of the affair, and the liquors, that there was no more "foolin' around the ladder" during the remainder of the night.

JEFFERSON in his Inaugural Address states the case thus:

"The essential principles of our Government and those which ought to shape its administration: Equal and exact justice to all men of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations—entangling alliances with none; the support of the State governments in all their rights, as the most competent administration for our domestic concerns and the surest bulwark's against anti-republican tendencies; the preservation of the general government in its whole Constitutional vigor as the sheet-anchor of our peace at home and safety abroad; a jealous care of the right of election by the people—a mild and safe corrective of abuses which are lopped by the sword of revolution where peaceful remedies are unprovided; absolute acquiescence in the decisions of the majority—the vital principles of republics from which there is no appeal but to force, the vital principle and immediate parent of despotism; a well disciplined militia, our best reliance in peace and for the first moments of war, till regulars may relieve them; the supremacy of the civil over the military authority; economy in the public expense, that labor may be lightly burdened; the honest payment of our debts and sacred preservation of the public faith; encouragement of agriculture and of commerce as its handmaid; the diffusion of information and the arrangement of all abuses at the bar of public reason; freedom of religion; freedom of the press; freedom of person under the protection of the habeas corpus and trial by juries impartially selected—these principles form the bright constellation which has gone before us and guided our steps through an age of revolution. The wisdom of our sages and blood of our heroes have been devoted to the attainment. They should be the creed of our political faith—the text of civil instruction—the touchstone by which to try the service of those we trust; and should we wander from them in moments of error and alarm let us hasten to retrace our steps and to regain the road which alone leads to peace, liberty and safety."

DONATION.—From the Catholic Sentinel we take the following:

We learn that Ben Holladay, Esq., President of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, has, with his usual liberality, donated a block of land at Gervais station, Marion county, for the purpose of building a Catholic Church thereon.

THE Chicago Times, after observing that the quarrel between Boutwell and Pleasanton originated in the awarding of a contract, says:

As is always the case in such quarrels, the combatants are implacable, and the head of one or the other must come off. Two tax-eaters with their noses in the same feeding trough never did agree.

A DISPATCH states that President Grant has pardoned Bowen, the bigamist. No reasons for this step have been given, and on its face it appears to be a very incomprehensible action. — Sacramento Record.

Not in the least "incomprehensible."

A PROPHECY.—The Spirit of the Times, in its issue preceding the assembling of the Radical State Convention, declared that if Booth were nominated for Governor, "Haight would beat him from ten to fifteen thousand votes."

THOMAS JEFFERSON and Martin Van Buren have been the only men in the history of this country who have been Governors of States, holders of first-class foreign missions, heads of Cabinets, Vice-President and Presidents.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PRESS.

RELIGIOUS NOTICES.

There will be regular preaching once in each month at the following named places, Rev. J. H. Neal pastor:
First Sabbath at the Mississippi School House at 11 o'clock.
Second Sabbath at the Scottsburg School House at 11 o'clock in the morning.
Third Sabbath at the Dry Creek School House at 11 o'clock in the morning.
Fourth Sabbath in the Court House, Millerton, at 11 o'clock.

TOWN AND COUNTY.

PREACHING.—The Rev. J. H. Neal preaches in the Court House on next Sunday morning and evening, at the usual hours.

THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS held an extra session yesterday, for the purpose of filling vacancies in the office of Clerks of Elections at the various precincts in this county.

STURGEON CAPTURED.—The Chinese captured a sturgeon in the river, near town, a few days ago, that measured about five and a half feet in length, and weighed one hundred and fifteen pounds.

HOT.—The weather has been a little hot during the past week. On last Saturday it stood at 108 degrees in the shade, at Jones Ferry, and 104 in our office at two P. M. The weather thus far this year, however, has been far cooler than usual.

MAN KILLED.—We are informed that a man who has been engaged in herding sheep near Dinker Flat, about thirty-seven miles from this place, in the mountains, was killed by a bear, a few days since. We have been unable to learn any particulars.

SIX MILES COMPLETED.—We learn that six miles of the Fresno Canal has been completed. The Company are pushing the work ahead energetically. At present some two hundred and fifty men and one hundred and fifty teams are engaged upon the work, and we hear that the heaviest part of the cutting has been passed and that henceforward the progress of the work will be more rapid.

HORSE DISEASE.—The terrible malady which we have made so frequent mention of seems to still prevail with unabated violence in the foothill regions of this section. More than three hundred head of horses have fallen prey to its terrible influence. We are in hopes that some effective remedy will be discovered. That it is contagious doubt can no longer be entertained from its action.

ON FIRE.—We learn that the grass in the foothills in the northern part of this county is all on fire. Whether the fire originated by accident or design we have been unable to positively learn, although it has been frequently asserted that it has been designedly set on fire in order to destroy the feed. At all events, a great quantity of good feed, that is really necessary for the sustenance of the vast flocks and herds within the confines of Fresno, is being ruthlessly destroyed.

The greatest want of the present age is men and women, healthy and vigorous in mind and body. The continued headaches, weakness, nervousness, and varying ailments which afflict women are generally the result of imperfect action of the stomach and other vital parts. Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters, being composed entirely of vegetable substances indigenous to California, may be taken with perfect safety by the most delicate, and are a sure remedy for all female complaints, correcting all wrong action and giving new vigor to the whole system.

PARTY AT SWEET'S MILL.—On last Thursday evening a party was given by Messrs. E. Jacob and Jesse Morrow at their Flouring mill, on King's river. A large crowd was in attendance, and it passed off quite pleasantly. We regret our inability, owing to insufficiency of notice, to be present. We learn that it is the intention of the owners to move the mill to the town of Centerville, and when they have accomplished this object it is proposed to give another free "blow out." We are in hopes at that time that we may "be there to see."

THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY are debating the question whether to cross the Coast Range of mountains into the San Joaquin Valley through the Pacheco or Panoche passes. The former is the cheapest, and we believe would be the best route for the benefit of this county, but the chances are greatly in favor of the latter, as it passes through the most valuable coal region yet discovered on the Pacific Coast. The road will be rapidly pushed ahead as soon as the point of passage is determined.

OFFICERS ELECTED.—The following gentlemen were elected officers of Fresno Lodge, No. 186, I. O. O. F., N. G., J. W. Ferguson; V. G., J. N. Griggs; Secretary, H. S. Dixon; Per. Sec., J. H. Peters; Treasurer, W. W. Hill. The following officers were appointed by the N. G.: O. G., E. Miles; I. G., J. M. Shults; Warden, Jas. McCord; Conductor, C. G. Sayle; R. H. S. to N. G., A. Kennedy; L. H. S. to N. G., T. W. Simpson; R. S. S., J. C. Hoxie; L. S. S., J. M. Shannon; Chap. Hon. Gilliam Bailey. The officers were installed on the 17th inst., by P. G. R. L. Dixon.

WE HAVE SEEN some of the finest photographs ever produced outside of San Francisco at J. P. Spooner's, First Premium Photographic Painter, Kidd's Block, Stockton.

POSTPONED.—The Nevada Lottery, managed by the Cosmopolitan Benevolent Society, has been compelled to postpone its drawing until the 4th day of September next.

FOR COUNTY JUDGE.

MILLERTON, FRESNO CO., April 12th, 1871.
FELLOW CITIZENS:—I take this method of announcing through the Fresno Expositor, our county newspaper, that my name will be placed before you at the ensuing Judicial Election for re-election to the office that I have the honor now humbly to fill. My official acts as County Judge for the past three years are known to the voters of this county (whether good or bad). I do not claim that I have not committed any errors, but I do claim that whatever those errors may have been, they were of judgment and not of the heart. I feel a desire to fill the office for another term, as I feel that I can do so more satisfactorily to my self, having gained some knowledge of the state laws and practice. Having been in this State, feeling thankful, fellow citizens for past favors, if re-elected will continue to the best of my ability to discharge the functions of the office conscientiously under oath of office.
